IN THE NEWS

Not only is September a busy time with back-to-school events, but September is also Suicide Awareness Month. According to the Oregon Health Authority, although significant progress has been made over the last few years, Oregon's youth suicide rate is still considerably higher than the rest of the nation.

As our students, teachers, and administrators return to the classroom, SafeOregon is there to help.

- SafeOregon participated in several suicide awareness walks to promote the tip line as a resource to report concerns about a student's well-being if unsure about who to tell.
- Marion County Health & Human Services highlighted SafeOregon in their monthly Health Promotion and Prevention Pieces Newsletter.
- Eastern Oregon's Inter-Mountain Educational Service District worked with school administrators and law enforcement officials to lead a conversation around school safety, including the importance of the SafeOregon tip line.

Community Spotlight: Safe Oregon Tip Line for School Safety

Mental Health is a big topic of conversation in our community. Youth in particular are reporting high stress and anxiety and are concerned about violence in schools. Safe Oregon was created with the goal of helping students feel safe in school by providing a confidential way to report safety concerns. Safe Oregon Coordinator, Lisa Miller shares more information below.

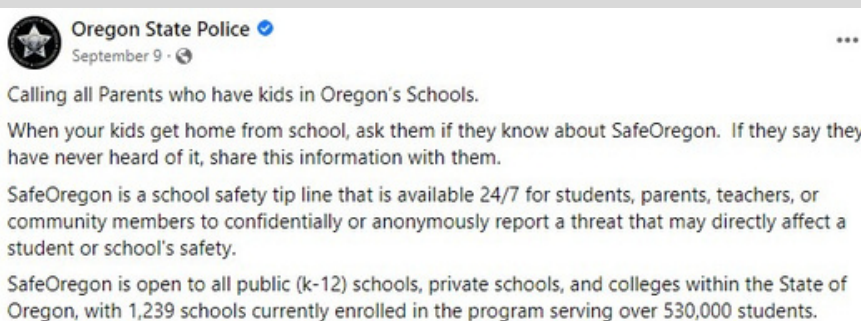

What is Safe Oregon?

Safe Oregon is a school safety tip line that students, parents, and other community members can use to anonymously report and share information regarding potential threats to student safety. These safety concerns may be about their school, friends or even themselves. Sometimes students need help from an adult at school and they are not sure who to tell. The reporting is confidential, so youth don't have to worry about their name being shared. There are several ways to submit a tip. They can call, text, email or report on the website. There is even a mobile app. Specially trained staff are available 24-hours-a-day, 365-days-a-year to receive these tips.
